Artificial Consulting, Artificial Services, what's next

January 1, 1996 --

Artificial Inc., officially opens it business to the Internet, according to President/CEO, Gordon Kraft. "It has taken some time to understand the Internet and how to market products and services on-line. We have been the number one computer diagnostics company for many years, we understand how and why they work. We have chosen to enter the Internet as an adventure, as a crusade of our time." Mr. Kraft has taken time to sit back and use his imagination to put the puzzle together and some times, the pieces just don't want to fit. " I have been in the computer business for over 30 years and I knew the technology would always go places where man has never been, and here we are. I'm excited to be a part of it, what a wonderful World we live in"!
